

Join our 7th summer course on Experimental Neolithic Pottery

Kiladha, Greece, August 16-21, 2021

The University of Geneva is pleased to announce its 7th summer course on Experimental Neolithic Pottery, which will take place in Kiladha (the Argolis, Greece) from August 16 to August 21, 2021.

The aim of this one-week intensive course is to provide students with hands-on experience in making pots the way they were done in the Greek Neolithic, from the gathering of clay to polishing, decorating and firing.

The course will be taught in English by skilled practitioners, and is open to students of all levels.

Tuition fees: 300 EUR

Free full-board accommodation included (7 nights in Kiladha, from August 15 to August 22).

Contact and applications: julien.beck@unige.ch

This summer course is organized by the University of Geneva, as part of the Bay of Kiladha project.
